Le Petit Parisien states that General

THE MONS FIGHT.

Records of Officers Killed.

The following is a brief record of those of the British officers mentioned in the supplementary war news killed:

Lieut. Col. C. Bond, D.S.O., 2nd Battalion King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, was born on April 28th, 1867, and joined the Yorks Light Infantry as a 2nd Lieut. in November 1888. He was Garrison Adjutant, Hongkong, in 1890 and A.D.C. to the Major-General of Bombay from 1893 to 1894. He served in the Zulu War in 1895 and in the N. W.
Frontier of India, 1897-8, and in the S.
African War, where he was mentioned in despatches and received the D.S.O.
Major C. A. L. Yates, of the same Regiment, was born in March, 1872, and joined the Yorks Light Infantry in 1892. He served in the N. W. Frontier of India and was a staff officer in the South African War.
He was dangerously wounded in the action at Enslin. He was mentioned in the despatches.

Major V. R. Brooker, O.I.D., D.S.O., of the 9th Queen's Royal Lancers, was born in January 1873, and joined the Army in December 1894. He was A.D.C. to Lieut-General, Chief of Staff, South Africa, 1901-02, and A.D.C. to Commander-in-Chief, East, India, in 1902. Before serving on the Staff in South Africa Major Brooker took part in the actions at Belmont, Enslin, Modder River, Magersfontein, and Paardeberg. He was slightly wounded.
Major C. S. Holland, of the Royal Field Artillery, was born in December 1875, and served in the South African War, 1902.

Major C. G. Pickersford, of the 2nd battalion West Kent Regiment, was born in November 1869 and was with the 2nd battalion which went to Ceylon in 1903.
He joined the Army in 1889. He served in the N. W. Frontier of India, 1897-98, talion West Riding Regiment, was born in July 1879 and served in the South African War, 1902-1903. He was in all the important actions leading up to the relief of Ladysmith and was severely wounded.

Major F. Swetenham, of the 2nd Dragoons, was born in June 1874, and served in the South African War 1899-1900.

HOME ITEMS.

The Duke of Sutherland has offered Dunrobin Castle, Sutherlandshire, to the Admiralty as a naval hospital, and it will be used as a central surgical base for the North Sea Fleet.

Cardinal Bourne has offered St. Andrew's Catholic hospital at Dulis' Hall for the absolute use of the Red Cross Society during the war.

On arriving safely in Holland, accompanied by his wife and the personnel of the German Embassy, Prince Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador, addressed the following message to Sir Edward Grey: "Please express to His Majesty's Government our sincere thanks for the great courtesy shown us during the journey."

As early as six o'clock on the morning of the first recruiting day in London there was a long queue of men waiting outside the central recruiting office in Great Scotland Yard. Later in the day, mounted men were called to assist the police in preventing the doors being rushed, and in the afternoon it became necessary to open divisional offices in the suburbs.

Nearly 300 firms in the City of London have decided to give half pay to their employees who are now on active service.
The Directors of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company have decided to pay full salaries to members of the office staff on active service and re-engage every man after the war.

Mr. Gwyn Lloyd George, second son of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, has been accepted for service with the Territorials, and has been appointed Lieutenant of the 6th Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

place at the disposal of the Government the whole of their organization at depots and agencies throughout the United Kingdom, with the clerical staff attached, for the distribution of food or for any other purpose for the public service during the continuance of the war.

SCOTTISH LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

EDINBURGH, Aug. 6.

During the anxious days when we watched rapidly advanced war, the attitude of the people of Scotland was quiet, grave, impressive. We are subject to emotional crises like other races, sometimes we break into fits of enthusiasm; but in the great circumstances of life we are reserved and dignified, and so it was on the present occasion. We had no hopes into hopeless daydreaming, no outbreak into Jingo disorder. The dominant note was more than gravity, it was sternness. From the outset there seems to have been a conviction throughout the North that war was inevitable, and when the last irrevocable step was taken there was no surprise, almost no sensation. One might say that a long breath, a kind of sigh passed over the land. It was a sigh of relief that the tension was over, that we knew the worst. We had tried our best to preserve peace, and all that remained now was to dare and do. Such a spirit does not make for boisterousness. It is a healthy spirit, all the same—one alive to responsibility and resolved that the duties required shall be given without flinching or complaining. It is a better prelude, undoubtedly, to the stress that lies before us than a lightheartedness due to an inadequate sense of that modern war means to a modern industrial community.

At the start of the crisis, there was little evidence in Scotland that anything unusual was on foot. In the streets, in the club, in the workshop men talked of Germany and the risks of a conflict, but there were no crowds, no processions, no demonstrations. The position was one of orderly waiting. For the impression here was that we were not drifting, that whatever was done was on the lines of a known policy. This was the great moral asset which kept the populace in through control. The position was one of orderly waiting. For the impression here
moral asset which kept the populace in through control.

The mobilisation of the Territorials was effected in the smoothest possible manner.
Wherever the men went they attracted attention, and their cheerful demeanour was the subject of general comment. It was quite evident that they thoroughly appreciated the fact that the public were at the conscious that they owe a debt to the men who have voluntarily sacrificed their leisure in order to fit themselves for their duty of defending our shores.

Fresh from their annual camp training, the units could not have been embodied when they were better qualified to undertake the work that lies before them. If any doubt existed as to whether the war in the rank would be filled it was speedily dispelled, for as the drill halls all over Scotland exterritorialism assembled and expressed their willingness, in many cases their anxiety, to be permitted to re-enlist and to accompany their comrades.

The war has, of course, dislocated a large number of industries. Some of them have been paralysed, as in the case of the great fishing industry of the North and West of Scotland. The summer herring industry was in full swing, and even although there was no war on the North Sea, very few boats or trawlers would have been able to leave the ports. In Lewis, for instance, there are about 2000 fishermen in the Naval Reserve, practically the whole manhood of the island.

WAR AND OVERSEAS TRAVEL.

Mr. J. Shield Nicholson, Professor of Political Economy in the University of Edinburgh, has published a consideration of the effects of war on prices. General prices depend upon a number of forces acting in different directions, but for the purpose of his analysis he takes only three—gold, credit, and the volume of trade—and the result he comes to is that the loss of money power in gold and credit will more than counterbalance the direct production. He argues that production will only be directly checked by the loss of distribution. In the case of the gold and the remains at present this will go on much as before, except for the foreign trade, and all the world over the foreign trade will be of relatively small importance compared with the home trade. The general conclusion comes to be, according to the Professor, that as the result of a great European war we may expect a general fall of prices on an average. There will, of course, be a great disturbance of relative prices intersecting things will rise greatly and others will fall a very great fall, but on the balance the trend will be downward. If such a general fall of prices does occur, the result will be a fall in profit and an increase in unemployment, it is possible that in the Napoleonic wars, the situation may become an inter-commercial character, and the consequent increase in cost of production and check on the volume of trade may become the dominating influence and cause a rise in prices.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

The conference of the British Medical Association at Aberdeen proved many of these quaint passages which rarely fail to lighten the talk of our doctors. These were most frequent when expert opinion differed—and they differed on most of the subjects debated. When the layman reads some of the speeches he is inclined to rub his hand and quote the old adage: "Who shall decide when doctors disagree?" The report of the conference is a valuable one, and it is a pity that it is not more widely read.
It is a pity that it is not more widely read.

by a message from Peking throwing doubt on the truth of the statement says the "Glasgow Herald." The Foreign Office has now received information that the concession has been finally approved by President Yuan Shi-Kai. The President admits the validity of all contracts entered into by the Manchu Government, of which the charter granted to British Marzan in 1909 was one. The amended charter gives the British group the exclusive right of working in conjunction with the Chinese, the vast oil resources of Seachuan, together with the mineral and industrial resources of the province, which is generally believed to be the richest in China. The grant of this concession means a great deal to British interests in the East. It means among other things that the province of Seachuan has passed to Great Britain.
The very size of the concession made is utterly hopeless to think that China ever seriously thought of granting it.
The President's recognition of the claim, however, means that at one stroke Great Britain has secured practical control of the province, with its population of 10,000,000 and what is believed to be the richest agricultural, mining, and timber lands in the vast and rich territory of China.

The situation to the East of Aronne and in Woivre is unchanged. The enemy occupy defensive positions in Lorraine and on the Vosges at the frontier.

BY TELEGRAPH.

London, Sept. 19, 5.15 a.m.
A further communiqué issued at Paris yesterday at 11 p.m. stated:—
"There is no change in the situation as a whole, except that we continue to make progress."
"On our Left Wing there is a slight lull in the battle."

Paris, Sept. 19, 3.15 p.m.
In Paris the consensus of opinion is that the battle of the Aisne is the most important since the beginning of the war. It is not a rear-guard action, but a supreme encounter closing an era of big operations on French soil.

It is realised that the Allies' gains are necessarily slow, owing to the enormous strength of the German positions.
Final success will probably be achieved by threatening German communications.

3.40 p.m.
The Official Press Bureau announces that the situation is unchanged. A counter-attack against the First Division during the night was driven back. The weather was bad; raining heavily.

5.30 p.m.
A Paris communiqué issued this afternoon says:—
"Our Left Wing on the right bank of the Meuse near Moyon made many prisoners. We held all the heights on the right bank of the Aisne against the enemy, who is apparently being reinforced by troops from Lorraine."
"The Germans on our Centre have not moved from their deep trenches. The French Prince's army continues to retreat, and our advance in Lorraine is tactically continuous."

Thus the battle is proceeding at various points along the whole line. Both the Allies and the Germans are strongly entrenched.

London, Sept. 20, 3.30 a.m.

A special statement issued in Paris at 10 p.m. stated:—
"The general situation on the Aisne is favourable to the Allies."
"The Left Wing captured a flag south of Noyon and took numerous prisoners belonging to the Twelfth and Fifteenth Corps and the Guards after a series of fighting on the Plateau of Craonne."

"Despite extremely violent attacks, the Germans have failed to make the slightest headway before Rheims. They bombarded the Cathedral all day."

"The general position on the Left Wing is unchanged. In the Centre we advanced on the western side of Argonne."

"There is nothing new to report on the Right Wing."

FRENCH OFFICIAL SUMMARY.

The following official telegram from the French Government came via Peking on the 18th inst.:

"On the Left Wing of the Allies on the 16th inst. the Germans continue to offer resistance from the hills north of the Aisne, although they have retired slightly at certain points."

"The Germans front line passes over Noyon, Moyon, Conde-sur-Aisne and Craonne."

"In the Centre between Berry-au-Bac and Argonne the situation is unchanged."

"Between Argonne and the Meuse the Germans are entrenching as far as Montfaucon."

"In the West of the Allies are in contact with many of the enemy's detachments between Escaut and Thiaucourt."

"In Lorraine and the Vosges there is no modification in the situation."

"A battle continues along the whole front between the Oise and the Meuse."

"The Germans occupy defensive positions, with heavy artillery."

"The progress of the French armies can only be slow, but the spirit of the offensive stimulates the French troops, who are showing vigour and enthusiasm."

"They successfully repelled counter-attacks which were made day and night by the enemy."

"The Austrian armies are evacuating Galicia."

MR. ASQUITH ON GERMANY'S GROSS AND FANTASTIC MISCALCULATION.

London, Sept. 18, 11 p.m.
Mr. Asquith, addressing a meeting at Edinburgh, at which many notables, including Lord Rosebery, were present, declared that the war was the deliberate act of Germany, due to a gross and fantastic miscalculation by the Kaiser's advisers of the true spirit of Great Britain, India and the Colonies.

Proceeding, the Prime Minister said:—"Louvain, Malines and Germonde will henceforward be names branded on the brow of German culture. The full accomplishment of our task will certainly take months, possibly years, but nothing short of its full accomplishment is worthy of our traditions or will satisfy our resolve."

London, Sept. 19, 6.15 a.m.
The English papers ridicule the talk of peace.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT TELEGRAMS.

BEKING, Sept. 19, 7.30 p.m.
The battle continued on the whole front from Oise to Woivre during the 17th without any important changes at any point.

On the right bank of the Aisne in the region of Noyon the French troops progressed and are holding the heights on the north bank of the Aisne between Ribecourt and St. Simeon. The Germans seem to have been reinforced by troops from Lorraine.

In the centre they have built deep trenches and did not move out from them.

On the right wing the Crown Prince's army is still retreating and is now between Montfaucon and Pothuville. The French advance in Lorraine is regular. On the whole there are partial attacks on the whole front, without any decisive results.

Under Thy wings;
Make all the nations one,
All hearts beneath the sun, Till Thou shalt reign alone, Great King of Kings.

WAR NEWS.

ANTI-GERMAN RIOTS.

A telegram from Copenhagen gives an account of the abominable outrages inflicted upon Russian diplomats and their wives in Berlin. The indignation at this treatment took overt form at St. Petersburg on August 4, when a huge crowd decimated the Nevsky Prospect, and after wrecking the German cafe, newspaper office, and several bakeries, surrounded the Embassy. The mounted police were completely overpowered, the iron gates of the Embassy forced, the interior gutted, and the staff surrounded by the German Eagle taken down and thrown away. After barbarous efforts two colonial troops surrounded the building were overpowered. The wrecks, however, were unable to remove two huge bronze horses, which, together with some nude figures, have rendered the new German Embassy in the monumental Behrens style an object of particular antipathy to Russians.

A STRANGE GERMAN INSTITUTION.

Although the Germans will not eat rabbit they are by no means squeamish in their diet. Their diets in Germany's curious institution known as the Freibank. It is described by Mr. F. W. Hackwood as "a municipal market at which is sold only meat that has been taken from diseased animals, or the flesh of injured animals that have been feral, or meat that has been so diseased as to have required a long process of sterilisation. The work of this institution is philanthropic, and earnest sanitarians are engaged in it. The poor, it is found, will not refrain from eating flesh, and would certainly indulge in diseased meat and become diseased themselves if access to harmless meat were not offered to them at the Freibank. Hotels, restaurants, and sausage-makers are forbidden to buy at this remarkable institution."
